EPA Chief Says Krancer's Letter Won't Help Dimock Residents

Envi-ron-men-tal Pro-tec-tion Agency Administra-tor Lisa Jackson says she found it “puzzling” that Pennsylvania’s top reg-u-la-tor would write a letter critical of her Agency’s role in Dimock’s water problems. Last week Depart-ment of Envi-ron-men-tal Pro-tec-tion Sec-re-tary Michael Krancer sent a let-ter to Jack-son telling her the EPA’s knowl-edge of the sit-u-a-tion is “rudimentary.” Krancer has expressed hos-til-ity toward the EPA’s actions sev-eral times since tak-ing over as DEP Sec-re-tary last year.

At a press conference Friday at the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia, Jack-son said fed-eral regulators need more data on Dimock’s water.

“That’s what I’m committed to,” said Jack-son. “It’s puzzling to me how writing letters will help the peo-ple in Dimock.”

Jack-son said the EPA has not got-ten all the data they need from the DEP.

“If we can get the data, or if he [Krancer] can assure us that they’re look-ing at the data,” said Jack-son, “then I would be fine.”

In the January 5 let-ter to Administra-tor Jackson, Krancer also crit-i-cized the EPA’s conclusions about the cause of water pollution in Pavil-ion, Wyo. The EPA recently released a report that linked fracking operations to residential drinking water contamination in Pavilion.

The EPA is considering supplying water to Dimock, Pa. residents after the DEP told Cabot Oil and Gas it could stop those deliveries. Administrator Jackson says before any water gets shipped to Dimock, more testing and data are needed.
